Home Legends' Product Portfolio Receives GREENGUARD Children & Schools® Certification

Home Legend Meets the Highest Industry Standard for Indoor Air Quality

Adairsville, GA (February 15, 2011) – Home Legends' product portfolio of quality Laminate, Hardwood, Bamboo and Cork flooring has received GREENGUARD Children & Schools Certification. Greenguard Children & Schools Certification indicates that a product has met one of the highest environmental standards for clean indoor air and contributes to healthy home, work, school and other indoor environments.

GREENGUARD Children & Schools standards establish emission criteria to define low-emitting materials for environments where people spend an extended period of time. Of primary concern in indoor environments is exposure to volatile organic compounds (VOCs) released from sources commonly used in homes and commercial buildings such as furnishings, paint, cleaning agents, solvents, flooring products and building materials. VOCs contribute to poor indoor air quality which has a number of negative health implications. Short-term consequences include triggering asthma and allergy attacks and flu-like symptoms and long-term exposure may lead to complications with respiratory and neurological disease. Additionally, children, in particular, are vulnerable to impure airborne toxins, as they have higher inhalation rates per pound of body weight than adults.

As an independent, not-for-profit organization dedicated to improving public health and quality of life through programs that improve indoor air quality, GEI created the GREENGUARD Children & Schools Certification ProgramSM to recognize products which meet or exceed stringent requirements for low chemical emissions.
